THE TRAVELER AND HIS FRIENDS.

A Gallic Legend.

BY JOHN G. SAGE.

A gentleman, about to make a trip at sea, was begged to take Commissions for a dozen friends. One wants a watch; another sends for wine; a very special cork. And if it is not too much to ask—Some choice cigars; a box will do; Or, while you're at it, purchase two! Another friend would like a pair of boots—"they're so much cheaper there." A lady friend would have him buy Some lace—"if they're not too high!" Another wants a box of gloves;—"French kids, you know, are real loves!" Thus one wants this; another, that; A book, a bonnet, or a hat; Enough to make the moody man (So high their "small commissions") ran, In tale and bulk) repeat that he Had ever thought to cross the sea! Moreover—he it here remarked—Before the gentleman embarked, His friends, for fear he might forget Their little errands, plainly set Their wishes down in black and white; A sensible proceeding—quite; But—as it happened—not a friend (With one exception) thought to send The ready money. Well, need I say, That soon his neighbors came to pay Their greetings at his safe return, And charming health; and (also) learn About their little errands—what For each the traveler had got? "By Jove!" he said, "it makes me sad To think what wretched luck I had! For as at sea I sat one day, Arranging in a proper way The papers you so kindly sent, A gale arose, and off they went Into the ocean! I nor could I Remember what you bade me buy!" "But," grumbled one, "if that were so, How comes it, sir, you chanced to know What this man wanted?" "Well, need I say, Has got what we desired, we see!" "Faint!" he said, "beyond a doubt! His is how it came about; And his memorandum chanced to hold A certain sum of solid gold; And thus the paper by its weight Escaped the other's windy fate!"

AN OWN UNCLE OF THE PRESIDENT—Why He is Not in Office.—Mr. L. A. Welsh, of the Clarksville (Mo.) Sentinel, writing from Mayslick, Mason county, Ky., to his paper, makes public the following discovery:
"One mile to the south of Mayslick stands the humble and almost crumbling cottage of Roswell Grant, an own uncle of the President, and perhaps the only one of a wide family connection who is not stored away in some comfortable corner in the public crib. The affair is a small one, and a half-story log frame house, dingy and dilapidated. Attached to it are several acres of land, from which 'Old Roswell' digs a precarious livelihood. He is poor, and habitual and confirmed intemperance has almost unfitted him for labor. His hair is considerably gray likewise his beard, which is also tolerably long. A large frame with drooping shoulders; a broad face, with very small and ugly eyes, and a very red nose; a wishful, longing look, and you have a personal description of Roswell Grant. The old fellow is usually very good-natured, and consumes all the Bourbon that his friends will give him, or that he can afford to buy with his beggarly means. We well remember how punctually the old man visited Mayslick every day for full three months after the inauguration of General Grant, to watch the daily mails for the President as consul to Cuba, which he was destined never to see. Having been disappointed in his Cuban prospects, Roswell fled his application for the United States collectorship for the district, and this, too, was refused him, for a reason never made public, but really because Jesse R., the President's father, did not like Roswell, who is a Democrat, and would not vote for Gen. Grant. The President made his uncle a visit in 1863, just after his nomination, but stayed only an hour and a half!"

A BISMARCK ANECDOTE.—Mr. Charles Bollen, in his "Story of Count Bismarck's Life," tells this anecdote of the great Premier:
"The value of a good cigar," said Bismarck, as he proceeded to light an excellent Havana, "is best understood when it is the last you possess, and there is no chance of getting another. At Konigsgratz I had only one cigar left in my pocket, which I carefully guarded during the whole of the battle as a miser does his treasure. I did not feel justified in using it. I pointed in glowing colors in my mind the happy hour when I should enjoy it after the victory. But I had miscalculated my chances." "And what was the cause of your miscalculation?" "A poor dragon. He lay helpless, with both arms crushed, murmuring for something to refresh him. I felt in my pockets and found I had only gold, and that would be of no use to him. But, stay; I had still my treasured cigar! I lighted this for him, and placed it between his teeth. You should have seen the poor fellow's grateful smile! I never enjoyed a cigar so much as that one which I did not smoke."

Why are lovers like armies? Because they get along well enough until they are engaged.

Horace Greeley presents the following as a destroying the prosperity of towns. There can be no town.

"If you wish to keep a town from thriving, don't put up any more buildings than you can conveniently occupy yourself. If you should accidentally have an empty dwelling, and if any one should want to rent, ask three times the actual price of it. Demand a Shillock price for every spot of ground that God has given you stewardship over. Turn a cold shoulder to every mechanic or business man seeking a home among you. Look at every new comer with a scowl. Run down the work of every new workman. Go abroad for wages, rather than deal with those who seek to do business in your midst. Fail to advertise, or in any other way to support your paper, so people abroad may not know whether any business is going on in your town, or not. Wrap yourselves up within yourselves, and cover your eyes with a countenance like those enumerated, and there are people in every town who are pursuing the same course every day of their lives, and to whom the above remarks are most respectfully offered for their careful attention."

At a negro camp-meeting in Georgia, the other day, the orator of the day seeing some of the members had whisky bottles in their pockets said: "That's some of these here bredder'n tryin' to get into the kingdom with a whisky bottle in their pockets. The gate of Hebben's mighty narry, bredder'n; much as ever you is gwine to do to squeeze in yourself. How does yer speet yer gwine to get in ther with a whisky bottle hung to yer?" A member asked him what they should do with them. "Bring 'em right up to de pulpit," said the speaker, "and I will offer dem as a sacrifice to the Lord." About a half dozen bottles were accordingly transferred to the pulpit. The darkey gave a short sermon and then repaired to his tent, and two hours after was so drunk he couldn't stand alone.

The much-talked-of overthrow of the famous column in the Place Vendome does not seem to have involved any serious destruction of property. A competent architect estimates the cost of its restoration, precisely as it stood before, at a trifle over fifty thousand dollars. This appears incredible, but the preservation of the column injured ten of the two hundred and seventy-four bronze plates of which its exterior was composed, and these require but comparatively slight repairs. A few bars of the balustrade and some pieces of the capital have disappeared; but these can be easily replaced.

Josh Billings says, "Most people decline to learn only by their own experience, and I guess they are more than half right; for I don't pose a man could get a correct idea of molasses candy merely by letting another teller taste it for him."

What are the most disagreeable articles for a man to keep on hand? Hand-cuffs.

Teaching a Horse to Stop.

When I get a new horse, and that is not very often, I make it my first business to teach that horse to stop suddenly, when I first say "whoa," by gently jerking on the lines, the horse soon begins to understand you. He should be first taught to stop while walking; then stopped on a gentle trot, and finally when driven rapidly. There is a lesson in the world that cannot be taught in a day's time to stop, by a short sharp "whoa," without drawing on the lines. And they should learn to do this, just as quick as they can. Presently, no matter how badly frightened the horse is, he will stop when he hears the word. Many horses become unmanageable when they get their tails out, and then, if anything touches their heels, away they go. To a horse properly taught, the word of the driver should be as potent as the stoutest lines.

Let me illustrate the value of my suggestions, by relating what I have saved in this way: Not long since, I purchased a spirited young horse, and the first lesson I gave him was to stop when I spoke to him. Soon after I hitched him to the buggy, and got into it with all my family. I dare not say how many of us there were, lest some of your readers should envy me. Enough, that with what I had at my side, and on my lap, I could scarcely see the horse.

An unlucky whist of the horse's tail brought the line under it, and quicker than I can tell you, the horse made two sudden bounds, and would have run away, but my timely "whoa" brought everything up standing; and I found the line as fast under the tail as though it were a vice. The united strength of my whole family could hardly have pulled it out. After standing a moment it came out itself. Then the whole family breathed easier, and the reporters of the daily press lost a good item.

One day my horse and buggy were standing in front of my office, and a headless expressman drove up with a top wagon, and fairly ran on my establishment. The fluttering of the expressman's curtains, and the rattling of his rickety wagon, frightened my horse so badly that he flew back, tore the bits out of his mouth, broke his hitching-strap, and started on to run.

Looking out of the window, I saw, with the most indignant eyes, the whole transaction. I sprang to the door and spoke a loud sharp "whoa," and although I was some five or six rods from the horse, he stopped as though he had met a stone wall in his road. I breathed easier again, for I had saved fifty dollars or seventy-five, the amount of the threatened smash-up.

Another day, my horse standing hitched and kicking flies, got his feet entangled and fell down. While struggling to rise, the rump strap broke, and feeling himself loose, he sprang to his feet and started on a lively run, with the buggy in the rear. An old farmer gentleman just passing instinctively cried out "whoa."

"My gracious, mister," said he, "I never saw the like of that, where, if I had hit the horse over the head with a club, he wouldn't have stopped any quicker. Finchewe, well broken; been one of my horses, sir, your wife would have had plenty of kindling wood. Never stopped a horse that way before."

Cor. Ohio Farmer.

CURE FOR NERVOUS HEADACHE.—A well known Kentucky minister, subject to severe spells of nervous headache, was in one of those attacks, says an exchange, during one of his visits. Major Brown, of Mexico, was present, and proposed to relieve him in five minutes, which he did most effectually. The following is the prescription: Take a desert-spoonful of common soda, such as is used in making bread, and dissolve it thoroughly in a quart of cold water. With this thoroughly shampoo the head for about five minutes, scratching the skin of the head and the back of the neck well with the finger-nails. Then rinse the head with clean cold water. Major Brown says that he has used this remedy in perhaps a thousand cases since 1853, and never once failed to give relief in five or ten minutes. This remedy is for nervous headache, and is not for those afflictions of the head arising from deranged stomachs.

UNDERGROUND BONE.—Some time ago, we saw the use of bones recommended, and a rich growth promised to all who would take precaution to place a piece of bone in the bottom of each pot, when transplanting flowers. Always anxious to adopt every device to promote the well-being of our floral favorites, we determined to try the bone experiment. Knowing that bone-dust is one of the best fertilizers for Fuchsias, when used in moderation, we included several Fuchsias in our experiment. The plants were carefully potted, a piece of bone being placed over the drain. In a short time, the plants began to sicken, and the lives of several fine roses, geraniums, etc., were saved by transferring them to other pots. Instead of finding the fibrous roots twining themselves about the bone, as we were told they would do, they were brown and discolored and shrinking away as fast as possible, with the plant's fine instinct that there was literally "death in the pot."—Kentucky People.

SOUP.—All soups are better to be made with fresh uncooked meat, as that which has been cooked once has lost much of its flavor and nearly all of its juices. It is therefore better economy to hash or slice your cold meat, and buy fresh for soup. Soup should not boil very hard, as that has a tendency to toughen the meat. Fat meat is not so proper nor healthy for soup as the lean parts of the finest meat. The fat does not impart much flavor, and is not palatable. Soup may be kept till the next day; before it is heated over again skim off the cake of fat which congeals on the top.

When color on a fabric has been accidentally or otherwise destroyed by acid, ammonia is applied to neutralize the same, after which an application of chloroform will, in almost all cases, restore the original color. The application of ammonia is common, but that of chloroform is but little known. Chloroform will also remove paint from a garment or elsewhere, when benzole, or bisulphide, or carbon fails.

FOR RED ANTS.—John H. Ferguson, of Rensselaer county, N. Y., writes, that he has thoroughly cleared an old house of this pest twice within the past fifteen years, thus: "Grease a plate with hog's lard, and set it where the ants are troublesome; they will desert the sugar-bowl for the lard. Place a few sticks around the plate for the ants to climb up on. Occasionally turn the plate bottom up over a fire, where there is no smoke, and the ants will drop off into the fire. Reset the plate, and in a few repetitions you will catch all the ants. They trouble nothing while lard is accessible."

LONG WICKS.—Cram all the wick you can into the lamp, fill up the interstices with sponge, and saturate the whole with kerosene. The supply is sufficient for the longest winter night; as long as any oil remains in the wick the lamp keeps burning. This has been fairly tested. As the wick burns away keep filling up with sponge, and you have the nearest approach to a safety lamp.

RIVER SAND.—Many of our ladies find it inconvenient to procure sand for use in potting flowers, raising slips, etc. We have found the coarse sand that washes down from the turnpike to answer every purpose. Indeed, we have tried both, and find that plants potted with the coarse sand are in much better condition than those in soil, mixed with fine sand from the river.—Kentucky People.

CHOPPED PICKLES.—One gallon green tomatoes chopped fine, four green peppers, three onions, handful of salt sprinkled over them; let them stand six hours, drain off the liquid and add one tablespoonful ground pepper, one of allspice, one of mustard, one half pint of mustard seed, three pints of vinegar.

FOR SALE.

A LARGE &amp; SPLENDID FARM,

AND EXTENSIVE AND VARIOUS

PERSONAL PROPERTY.

HEALTH REQUIRING ME TO WINTER in Florida, I will sell the Farm on which I reside, containing over seven hundred and eighty acres, situate in Franklin and Woodford Counties, Ky., five miles from Frankfort, on the Railroad to Lexington, and the Turnpike to Versailles, and I can confidently say there is no better farm in Kentucky, all things considered.

The Location is beautiful, convenient, and healthy.

The Buildings are elegant, spacious, substantial, and for all appropriate purposes; the Farm being supplied with three other comfortable dwellings and suitable buildings, besides the principal residence.

The Soil was naturally good, and has been kept in a high state of fertility, and is now ready to yield the heaviest crops of hemp, grain, and grasses.

The Water is of all kinds, abundant, and convenient for domestic, stock, and ornamental uses.

The Fencing is of durable materials of various kinds, in good condition, with timber ample for future supply.

Society is excellent; and religious, educational, and social conveniences abundant and varied.

A Division of the Farm into four parts can be judiciously effected, so that each will have its appropriate dwelling and other buildings; and I will sell separately that part on the north side of the railroad, having superior soil, water, timber, roads, and two sets of buildings, all in good condition.

The Terms will be made easy, after a cash payment of one half of the purchase money at the time of giving possession in October next. Purchasers are invited to inspect the premises in person, or apply by mail for full description.

An Auction Sale will be held on the premises on the 5th of September next, consisting of Durham Cattle, "Improved Kentucky" Sheep, Cashmere Goats, Fattening Hogs, Farm and Saddle Horses, Crops on hand, and Implements of all kinds, which will be duly advertised.
